FOUR SEASONS RITUAL

According to Chinese medicine, the four seasons live in the same way in humans and nature. These are large energy movements that occur in all living things. Any alteration of these overall energy movements may cause physical disorders such as insomnia, fatigue, water retention and digestive problems or psychological issues such as nervousness, irritability and agitation. Treating the face, considered to be central organiser of individuals on the whole, this ritual works on body organs responsible for various bodily functions to restore the individual energetic state, helping to perceive and regulate the interior world we often forget to reconnect to.
